

In the early 1970s, Talbert Gray was the first black television news reporter in Florida. He faced the racial barriers and broke through them, and he continued to challenge the norms, adding to his list of “firsts” for decades to come.

Former WESH Channel 2 reporter (1971) Talbert Gray’s lifetime accomplishments go beyond breaking racial barriers to owning radio stations and making his mark in journalism. His story presents a compelling and motivational narration of accomplishment and achievement. The message of this book is not just Talbert Gray’s personal journey, but what anyone can achieve. The lesson of this book is to always be ready to charge ahead “Through the Fire.”
